SCHMIDT, FRITZ

German Commissar General for Special Services in Holland / died on June 27 while on official business in France; according to the Deutsche Zeitung in den Niederlanden, a Nazi organ in Holland, the mystery of Schmidt's death has been 'cleared up'; the paper said Schmidt was taken ill while on a train enroute to Paris and retired to his berth early; during the night, feeling violently ill, he tried to obtain fresh air and fell from the rapidly-moving train before his attendants could help him; he died shortly afterward of injuries / rebuking the outbreak of rumors that the German official had been assassinated, the Nazis insisted it was 'a fatal accident'; among the reports contrary to the Nazi version was one the Soviet News Agency reported

SCHMITT, DR. PAUL (documented SCHMITT)

Chief of Foreign Press Section of Foreign Office; under 40; typical fat, short-necked German; ruthless but intelligent and a hard worker; central German of lower middle class family who struggled to educate him; in spite of university education, has a mind as automatically Nazi as GOEBBELS; of younger school of Nazis who could easily switch to Communism, and his joy over Russo-German pact of 1939 was therefore genuine; great friend of Baeumer until they quarreled over their night-club escapades; his wife (q.v.) disapproved of this friendship; probably had a number of night-club run-ins with Pierre HUSS (see U.S.), and realized that Baeumer's friendliness with Russ, LOCHNER (see U.S.) and ENDERIS (see U.S.) was not improving American Press' relations with Germany; was delighted when this friendliness disrupted unity of U.S. press in Germany; told OESCHNER (see U.S.) that he would resent Foreign Press Club's electing an American president; in spite of this they elected Oeschner; with his assistant RASCHE (q.v.) he was in charge of Press Club of Foreign Office; accompanied RIBBENTROP on his trip to Moscow, and believed strongly in possibility of German-Russian cooperation; if he is a borderline Communist he might possibly work with German underground Communists when Nazi system starts to crumble; German and Russian underground probably have definite information as to his usefulness.

At one time grew weary of bullying foreign correspondents and longed for calm dignity of a diplomat's life, but RIBBENTROP made him remain at his post as indispensable / when last in Stockholm, told German correspondents there (of which there are about 50) to miss no chance of depicting danger of Communist revolt in Sweden; this line is doubtless to be used as a pretext for German interference when the King dies and his pre-Ally son accedes.
